Abstract The American Committee on Italian Migration (ACIM) was organized in February 1952 as a member agency of the National Catholic Resettlement Council, which later formed part of the National Catholic Welfare Conference (NCWC). From its inception, ACIM's chief objective was the liberalization of the United States immigration policy, which delineated in the McCarran-Walter Act of 1952, rested upon a restrictive "national origins" quota. ACIM undertook a wide range of activities, from raising funds to sponsoring new Italian immigrants into the United States and promoting new immigration legislation by Congress. This collection contains additional materials donated to CMS by ACIM in 2003, mostly documenting ACIM's work in the 1970s-1990s. The collection contains office files and case records pertaining to lobbying US Congress regarding immigration law, and to the assistance of Italian immigrants in Italy and the United States.

Biographical/Historical note

The American Committee on Italian Migration (ACIM) was organized in February 1952 as a member agency of the National Catholic Resettlement Council, which later formed part of the National Catholic Welfare Conference (NCWC). From its inception, ACIM's chief objective was the liberalization of the United States immigration policy, which delineated in the McCarran-Walter Act of 1952, rested upon a restrictive "national origins" quota. ACIM undertook a wide range of activities, from raising funds to sponsoring new Italian immigrants into the United States and promoting new immigration legislation by Congress. With the passage in 1965 of the Kennedy-Johnson Bill abolishing the "national origins" quota, ACIM turned to aiding immigrants in migration and adapting to their new surroundings.

In 1952-1953, ACIM organized local chapters in about 100 United States cities and coordinated lobbying efforts in support of emergency immigration legislation. The passage by Congress of the Refugee Relief Act in 1953 permitted some 60,000 Italian refugees to enter the United States over the 5,645 Italian quota established by the McCarran-Walter Act. Throughout 1954 and 1955, ACIM was engaged in finding American sponsors for many of these prospective immigrants and then in 1956 upon their arrival in the United States in finding them homes and jobs. The following year ACIM chapters successfully pressured Congress to pass special legislation, the "Family Reunion Law," which allowed some 25,000 wives and minor children of Italian immigrants, to join their spouses in the United States. In 1958, ACIM mounted a campaign urging Congress to allow "Fourth preference cases" (i.e. sons and daughters over 21 and brothers and sisters of Italian immigrants) to rejoin their families in America. Stop gap measures passed by Congress in 1959, 1961, and 1962 hardly corresponded to the large number of applicants, which had accumulated over the decade. In 1963, ACIM figured prominently in the campaign for the adoption of the Kennedy-Johnson Immigration Bill, which abolished the "national origins" quota system.

The fulfillment of this long-standing ACIM objective did not resolve the large backlog of Italian immigration applications. After 1965, ACIM dedicated itself to the backlog and continued to lobby before Congress; provide immigration information to United States relatives of prospective immigrants; and it directly assisted the immigrants both in Italy where ACIM opened a branch office and after their arrival in the United States.

Judge Juvenal Marchisio, a prominent figure during the immediate post World War II period in "American Relief for Italy" and in "Boys Town" served as ACIM's National Chairman from its inception in 1952-1968. Reverend Caesar Donanzan, P.S.S.C. served as Executive National Secretary from 1952-1966 and was succeeded by Reverend Joseph A. Cogo P.S.S.C. Upon Judge Marchisio's retirement in 1968 Bishop Swanstrom was named to the post of the Chairman of the Board of Directors. Cogo and Swanstrom continued in their respective offices. In 2003, ACIM moved out of its longtime office on West 44th Street in New York City.

This Series consists of 47 folders ranging from 1952 to 1992. They contain planning materials and programs for fundraising events. ACIM raised funds at two level. The main office at ACIM organized cruises, dinners and the San Remo Ball, held annually at intervals of one or two years at various New York City hotel ballrooms. The chapters held brunches, luncheons, teas, fashion shows, and dinners and cruises of their own, and forwarded the proceeds to ACIM's New York office to support the programs of

Series V: General Correspondence 1953-1989Scope and Contents note

This Series contains 184 folders. Each year is comprised of two parts. One part is in alphabetical order by recipient. The other part is in chronological order by month. Not all years are represented, and the alphabetical and chronological files are not just different ways of organizing different copies of the same correspondence. The correspondence is usually in Italian, typed and signed by an ACIM employee, and written to answer inquiries concerning American and Italian old-age pensions, health care benefits, immigration law, international banking, or veterans benefits.

office files, correspondence, and papers from social work cases to which he attended personally. Mr. Antonio Colao ran ACIM's Naples office, which served Italians and American citizens of Italian descent in Italy, and this Series contains his reports to ACIM's New York office and his correspondence. Judge Juvenal Marchisio helped to found ACIM in 1953, included is correspondence to and from him, and short biographies of him used for publicity purposes.

This Series also contains multiple folders on topics of importance to ACIM's leadership and members. ACIM was founded to lobby the U.S. Congress on immigration issues, and there are several boxes of folders of correspondence with Members of Congress and the Senate, plus press releases and drafts of pending legislation, especially the 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act, also known as the Simpson-Mazzoli Act. There are also clippings, correspondence, financial papers and press releases related to efforts to relieve victims of Italy's 1976 and 1980 earthquakes. Descriptions of organizations and individuals of interest are included in the folder-level description that follow this section.
