Biographical/Historical note

The National Catholic Welfare Conference (NCWC), Department of Immigration was a bureau/department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, established in December 1920 directly under the Executive Department of the the NCWC. The NCWC was founded in 1919 by the bishops of the United States, as an outgrowth of the National Catholic War Council, which coordinated welfare activities of of the United States Catholic Church during World War I. Their aim was to unify, coordinate, and organize Catholic activities in the areas of education, social welfare, immigrant aid, citizenship, family life, and other activities. In 1922, the organization changed its name from the National Catholic Welfare Council to the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Upon the founding of the Bureau of Immigration, the bishops wished to establish a national Catholic immigrant aid organization with the goals augmenting the work already being accomplished by smaller ethnic societies which specialized in helping immigrant co-nationals, paying attention to the religious needs of Catholic immigrants, and serving as a clearinghouse for information regarding immigration and emigration. Their national headquarters were located at 1312 Massachusetts Avenue in Washington DC and open branch offices in New York, El Paso, and Philadelphia.

In 1953, the Bureau was raised to the status of Department, under the leadership of Bishop Michael J. Ready as Episcopal Chairman, Bruce M. Mohler as director, and Sarah Weadick, as assistant director. In 1964, Mohler was replaced by John E. McCarthy. Over the course of the NCWC's existence, the Department of Immigration subsumed the work and records of other organizations, including Committee for Catholic Refugees from Germany (became Catholic Committee for Refugees in 1940), the International Catholic Office for Refugee Affairs (subsumed by 1941 by the New York Office) and the War Relief Services (Became Catholic Relief Services in 1955, folded in 1965).

In 1968, the NCWC was reorganized and replaced by the United States Catholic Conference and the National Council of Catholic Bishops and in 2001, the USCC and NCCB were replaced by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB).

Scope and Contents note

This collection contains the general correspondence files accumulated by the Washington headquarters of the National Catholic Welfare Conference (NCWC) from 1920-1970. This collection contains correspondence and other working files of the organization, including clippings, telegrams, memos, speeches, pamphlets, mimeo materials, press releases, reports, minutes, agenda, congressional bills, notes, lists, cross reference sheets, annual reports, photographs, and other material. Most of this material consists of correspondence with other immigrant aid and welfare organizations, including the National Council of Catholic Women, the National Council of Catholic Men, the American Council of Voluntary Agencies for Foreign Service, and other organizations. Most correspondence is directed to Bruce Mohler, head of the NCWC Department of Immigration. The collection also contains a significant amount of information related to Ellis Island and the NCWC's El Paso office. Material in this collection is organized by subject, this includes material on countries, organizations, people, and other subjects. These files are a combination of correspondence and their own research material on these topics. In addition, there is a significant segment of the collection related to legislation regarding immigrant affairs.

Although the organization was chiefly interested in the spiritual and material well being of incoming Catholic immigrants, these records represent their work attending to other immigrant problems, including presenting oral argument to the Board of Immigration Appeals on behalf of aliens who had been denied admission, ordered to depart, or inadvertently broken law. Other work included carrying on national and international correspondence relating to technical and legal problems of aliens, cooperation with foreign agencies that were engaged in helping the emigration of countrymen to the United States, and monitoring pending immigration and naturalization legislation. The collection also represents the aid provided to American citizens with foreign visa and transportation problems.

This collection provides a valuable resource on the different types of methods organizations provided aid to immigrants and refugees in the post war period. NCWC provided aid in many different ways; from providing foodstuffs to refugee communities, to organizing adoptions of orphan children, to raising money for Catholic organizations in war torn areas, to providing aid to new immigrants to the United States, to aid to displaced people in camps, to organizing legislation, among other activities. This collection also demonstrates how the Catholic community worked to aid immigrants and refugees.
