| Abstract | CMS.063A documents activities at Saint Charles Seminary on Staten Island, between the institution's founding in 1947 and the 1970s, when changes in seminary education led to its closing. The seminary was founded by the Saint Charles Province of the Society of Saint Charles-Scalabrinians, a congregation of male religious founded to minister to migrants in transit and in their new homes. Records pertaining to the seminarians are not available to researchers. The remaining records cover the management of the facilities and the more general aspects of seminary education. They may be of interest to researchers covering the history of the Catholic Church, especially in the Vatican II era, Italian-American history and culture, the development of migrant pastoral care in the third quarter of the twentieth century, the formation of candidates for the priesthood, and the Catholic community on Staten Island. |

Biographical/Historical note

The Saint Charles Seminary began as the home that architect Ernest Flagg built for his bride, Margaret Bonner, on land her family owned on Todt Hill, the highest point on Staten Island. Flagg had the street name changed to Flagg Place, and his home at 209 (zip code 10304) was named Stone Court.

Flagg died in 1947, and his widow sold the property to the Saint Charles Province of the Society of Saint Charles-Scalabrinians, a congregation of male religious founded in Italy in 1887. At that time, the congregation focused on the pastoral care of Italian immigrants and their descendents. The province was seeking to recruit and train Italian-American men to serve the offspring of immigrants who wished to maintain their ancestral religious culture. As the Scalabrinians had many institutions named for their patron saint, Charles Borromeo, they tended to refer to this property as "Flagg Place."

From 1947 to 1961 Flagg Place operated both a novitiate (entry-level) and a seminary (professional training) at Saint Charles Seminary. In 1961 the novitiate moved to a new facility at Cornwall, New York, leaving space at Flagg Place. In 1964, the province used the space to establish the Center for Migration Studies (CMS), a think tank devoted to collecting and disseminating data on contemporary human international migration via publications, conferences, and the maintenance of a library and archive. In 1967 the Flagg house became a New York City landmark and in 1983 the designation was expanded to include other buildings. The Scalabrinians dismantled Ernest Flagg's formal garden to create space for a wing of office and living space, and sold off property that has since been used to build single-family housing. Also, a copper beech tree on the estate's front lawn that gave one of the local streets its name died and to be removed. However, the rest of the front lawn and the house itself remained as Flagg left them.

The last seminarian left in the early 1970s, and the Scalabrinians used the property for CMS, a catering facility, and a congregation gathered from the surrounding area that met in the former seminary chapel. In 2005, Provincial Superior Joseph M. Fugolo, c.s., moved the province headquarters to the site, and CMS moved to the former provincial house at 27 Carmine Street, New York, New York, 10014. That arrangement proved temporary; in 2009 Provincial Superior Matthew Didone, c.s., moved the provincial house back to Carmine Street and the Center for Migration Studies to new facilities at 307 E. 60th Street. At that point, the contents of Flagg Place, including furniture that remained in the house after its sale to the Scalabrinians, were sold or moved, and the building became vacant.

Scope and Contents note

CMS.063A supplements CMS.063 and documents activities at Saint Charles Seminary on Staten Island. The seminary was founded to educate young men who felt called not only to the priesthood, but to membership in the Scalabrinians, a congregation of male religious that had been founded in 1887 to minister to migrants in transit and in their new homes. Being founded in Italy, the congregation's members started working among Italian immigrants. By the time the seminary was founded, the congregation was recruiting the sons of immigrants to continue this ministry to new generations. However, at the same time, migration patterns and the Catholic Church were both changing, and Scalabrinian seminary education changed in response. The last seminarians left Saint Charles by the early 1970s.

About that time, some materials from the seminary, mostly photographs and publications, were transferred to the Center for Migration Studies and processed for the archives. This deposit contains the educational records of Saint Charles' students and also material related to their professional lives; this material is closed to researchers.

However, the deposit also contains material relevant to the overall educational mission of Saint Charles Seminary, such as catalogs, course syllabi, and yearbooks. It documents some of the activities of the groups of men and women laity who formed to support Saint Charles Seminary and who remained active years after the seminary closed and the ministry to this group of laity became one of the place's main functions. It also contains information relevant to the management of the physical facilities. This information is significant because the building in which the seminary was located, and the land around it, are landmarked by New York City.

Conditions Governing Access note

Records pertaining to the seminarians are not available to researchers. The remaining records, pertaining to the management of the facility and to seminary education more generally, are open to researchers by appointment.

Conditions Governing Use note

Copyright is owned by the Center for Migration Studies. Permission to publish materials must be requested before use.

Immediate Source of Acquisition note

CMS.063A was deposited in 2005 at the Center for Migration Studies by Joseph M. Fugolo, c.s., then Provincial Superior of the Province of Saint Charles, Society of Saint Charles-Scalabrinians.

Processing Information note

Archivist Nick Falco processed CMS.063, the initial deposit of the Saint Charles Seminary Records, in the mid 1980s. In 2005, Father Joseph Fugolo made a second deposit. In 2010, Mary Brown processed that second deposit as part of a larger project to transfer the CMS archives from their founding home on Staten Island to their new location in Manhattan.

Related Materials

Related Archival Materials note

063, the original deposit of the Saint Charles Seminary records.

064 and 064A, Immaculate Conception Novitiate (Cornwall, NY) Records and addendum, documenting activities at the novitiate, the starting level of training for the priesthood and for membership in the Scalabrinians.

074, Scalabrinian Miscellany, publications by members of the Scalabrinian community or about the community and its members.

078C, Saint Charles Provincial, Society of Saint Charles-Scalabrinians Records and addendums. Series FC documents activities at the successors to Saint Charles Seminary. Series IE documents activities at 209 Flagg Place, after the seminary left that site.

079, Saint Joachim, New York City Records. Saint Joachim was founded in 1887 to minister to Italian immigrants. In 1957, the city announced that the parish would be closed, the street on which it was located would be demapped, and the buildings for blocks around would be demolished to make way for Chatham Gardens, an apartment complex. The Scalabrinians and parishioners protested, especially because the parish was where Mother Frances Xavier Cabrini, later the first U.S. citizen to be recognized as a saint in the Catholic Church, entered her American ministry. The building was demolished in 1959.
